Microsoft brings HoloLens to 29 new markets

London,

As demand for mixed reality grows in the modern workplace, Microsoft has announced that it has brought its mixed reality smartglass HoloLens to 29 new European markets.

At the Future Decoded event in London on Wednesday, Microsoft outlined its vision for mixed reality in front of over 15,000 IT and business decision makers who came to talk about current and emerging trends happening at the intersection of business and technology.

"We shared how technologies like Microsoft 365, Microsoft HoloLens, Windows Mixed Reality, and 3D are helping companies, Firstline Workers, and Information Workers become agents of change in the modern workplace and digital transformation," said Lorraine Bardeen, General Manager, Microsoft HoloLens and Windows Experiences, in a blogpost.

She said that mixed reality empowers people and organisations to achieve more and the experiences would help businesses and their employees complete crucial tasks faster, safer, more efficiently, and create new ways to connect to customers and partners. "The era of mixed reality will serve as a catalyst for innovations in the workplace and we expect 'Firstline Workers' and 'Information Workers' to benefit significantly from solutions that blend our physical and digital reality," she said.
